The trees which line many of the streets in our towns and cities can often be regarded as part of a heritage landscape. Despite the difficult conditions of an urban environment, these trees may live for 100 years or more and represent òiving historyò in the midst of our modern streetscapes. This is the first book on the history of Britainòs street trees and it gives a highly readable, authoritative and often amusing account of their story, from the tree-lined promenades of the seventeenth century to the majestic boulevards that grace some of our modern city centers. The impact of the Victorian street tree movement is examined, not only in the major cities but also in the rapidly developing suburbs that continued to expand through the twentieth century. There are fascinating descriptions of how street trees have helped to improve urban conditions in spa towns and seaside resorts and also in visionary initiatives such as the model villages, garden cities, garden suburbs and new towns. While much of the book focuses on the social and cultural history of our street trees, the last three chapters look at the practicalities of how these trees have been engineered into concrete landscapes. This includes the many threats to street trees over the years, such as pollution, conflict with urban infrastructure, pests and diseases and what is probably the greatest threat in recent times ò the dramatic growth in car ownership. Street Trees in Britain will have particular appeal to those interested in heritage landscapes, urban history and the natural and built environment. Some of its themes were introduced in the authoròs previous work, the widely acclaimed Trees in Towns and Cities: A History of British Urban Arboriculture.

The long awaited decision in RE: M&B: Re W has many important implications for care planning as it provides a comprehensive review of the court's power to manage the process. This Special Bulletin by Robin Tolson QC, the first detailed consideration of the case, clearly sets out what the child law practitioner needs to know including what has happened to starred care plans, new guidelines on the use of interim care orders, and the House of Lords considerations on the human rights aspects of care planning in general and the Children Act 1989 in particular. The commentary is supplemented by precedents for making applications under the Human Rights Act and a set of essential materials on human rights in care proceedings, all of which ensures that every child lawyer and child care professional will benefit from reading this timely publication.
