Multiculturalism Examining The Politics Of Recognition

I read Charles Taylor's classic, Multiculturalism and the "Politics of Recognition", where he straddles the fine balance between universalism and relativism, a good nuanced discussion. Quote: "There must be something midway between the inauthentic and homogenizing demand for recognition of equal worth, on the one hand, and the self-immurement within ethnocentric standards, on the other.

The need, it can be argued, is one of the driving forces behind national- ist movements in politics. And the demand comes to the fore in a number of ways in today's politics, on behalf of minority or "subaltern" groups, in some forms of feminism and in what is today called the politics of "multiculturalism."
